How Watch Cases are Made.

It is a fact not generally known that the James Boss' Gold Watch Cases really contain more pure gold than many "solid" gold cases. The demand for these watch cases has led to the manufacture of a very poor grade of solid gold watch cases—low in quality, and deficient in quantity. These cases are made from 4½ to 10 karats, and a 5 or 6 karat case is often sold for 12 or 14 karats. It is NOT economy to buy a watch case so poor in quality that it will soon lose its color, or one so soft that it will lose its shape and fail to shut tight, thus letting in dust and damaging the works, or one so thin that a slight blow will break the crystal, and perhaps the movement. It IS economy to buy a James Boss' Gold Watch Case, in which NONE of these things ever occur. This watch case is not an experiment—it has been made nearly thirty years.

HAZLETON, PA., Oct. 24, 1882.

I sold two James Boss' Gold Watch Cases thirty years ago, when they first came out, and they are in good condition yet. One of them is carried by a carpenter, Mr. L. W. Drake, of Hazleton, and only shows the wear in one or two places; the other by Mr. Bowman, of Cunningham, Pa.; and I can produce one or both of these cases at any time.

WHEN I AM GONE.

When I'm gone you'll remember
The love that I gave in the past,
Sighing in cold, bleak December
For moments too happy to last.

When I am gone into silence,
Your heart-beats will throb for me then,
Leaning on memory for guidance—
A battle with madness and men.

When I am gone "o'er the ranges,"
And rest 'neath the blossoming sod,
Tempering time, with its changes,
Will leave me with peace and with God.

When I am gone from the heartless,
And vanish from those who pursue,
The world will not hold me faultless,
Though it could not convict me with you.

And when the rude world rebuked me,
And howled like a hound on my track,
Your love shone a glory around me,
Smiled in beauty and beckoned me back.

When I am gone the rough breaker
That roared through the storm of life,
Shall sweep me away to my Maker,
And end all this sardonic strife.

When I am lost in the ocean
That breaks on eternity's shore,
My spirit will smile in devotion
And soar with your love evermore.

—John A. Joyce.

HIS LIFE'S ONE HOLIDAY.

Huntingdon Wayne was thirty five and had never yet been in love. He had worked hard and well and had made a fortune which even he felt would enable him to marry without being recklessly imprudent, and he began to think it was time to decide upon a wife who should satisfy his somewhat fastidious requirements. She must be of a stately and noble presence—Wayne had rather an idea of a fine woman; not too young nor too emotional; Wayne was a person who hated scenes—in short, she was to be a woman made to order, and he found it more difficult to discover her than he had at first supposed.

It was with a feeling of something as akin to failure as his well regulated mind ever indulged in that he ordered his portmanteau packed for a fortnight's visit to Newton-on-Sea, and tore himself away from the fascinations of club and office life to pay a long promised visit to his old friend, Dr. Marshall. He had seen nothing of the Marshalls for years past, though there was a tie of old associations between them, and even something of sadder interest. Five years ago, when Wayne's uncle offered him a berth in the tea business, of which he was now the head, he extended a like offer to Huntingdon's younger brother, Jack; but Jack, always something of a hot-headed fellow, took offense at some word or deed of his elder's and refused the offer. Soon after he took some post on the east coast of Africa, and went out with high hopes of the fortune he was to bring back and lay at Hetty Marshall's feet.

Huntingdon heard of the engagement with some contempt for the folly which possessed two young people without a penny; but when, three years later, news came of poor Jack's death out in Zanzibar, the little bride that was to have been passed out of his mind, and it was only when an invitation came for him from the Marshalls, who were at Newton-on-Sea for Hetty's health, that the thought of her existence crossed him again.

He had not even seen her since she was a little child in pinafores, and when he was brought up, on the evening he arrived, to the side of a crimson hammock swung between two tall pine trees, and introduced to a slight, pale girl, whose great blue eyes were raised to his with a pathetic gentleness and sweetness, a feeling such as in all his thirty-five years of sensible life he had never before experienced shot through him with a thrill of wonder, and almost bewilderment. He took in his own the small, fragile, white fingers, and then laid them down almost revently on the soft cushions amid which she lay.

I suppose if any one had asked him then and there whether he believed in love at first sight, he would have answered as contemptuously as ever; and yet, for all that, he was as deep in love as ever man yet fell at one blow. He told himself it was a pity—a pity that only grew as the days passed by, and he saw how frail and delicate a creature her great trouble of two years had left her, it seemed to him it was his duty to try and atone to her for all the suffering and loss she had undergone, as if his life ought to make up to her for Jack's death, somehow. Strange, that duty had never had such a zest and a pleasure in it before.

She was a thing so new to his experience, with her pleading blue eyes, her soft little ways, and the pathos that hung about all that she did and said. Wayne used to sit and watch her furtively, as if she was a creature of some unknown race.

Three days after the first evening and the hammock, the ideal "fine woman" had died out of his mind, never to return, and before the week was over, he had said to himself—he, the practical, cool-headed Huntingdon Wayne—that life without little Hetty would be hardly worth the living, and that he must have her for his own, or die. Practical common sensical men often take the hardest form of the disease called love.

He spoke to Dr. Marshall before the middle of the second week, and asked his consent to win Hetty. The doctor listened with a good deal of surprise, but no appearance of displeasure, and when Wayne had finished, he grasped him heartily by the hand.

'My dear fellow,' he said with something between a smile and a sigh, 'you have my heartiest consent and my best wishes, if you can get Hetty to say 'Yes.' You are almost a part of poor Jack, and there's no one else I should so gladly call my son. Of course it rests with Hetty; but I know she does not dislike you, and you must trust to time for the rest. Love such as she gave poor Jack, perhaps the same woman never gives twice over; but there's no reason why she shouldn't love you well and make a good wife. The grief of two years back is passing away—it is more the physical state left by the shock of that time that wears on her now. Perhaps she will never be very robust but you will take good care of her, I'm certain.'

'She shall be strong again, please God, if I can make her so by my devotion.' said Huntingdon, while a vision of unspeakable happiness danced before his mind's eyes—a snow-white yacht cruising among smiling islands in a summer sea, seeking health for her own who was its queen.

'I'll leave the business to look after itself,' he thought, with a glow of rapture, "and travel round the world with her till the color comes back to her pale face, and the light to her eyes—yes, and the happiness to her heart.

So the fortnight wore away, and another was well nigh gone, and yet Wayne lingered at Newton-on-Sea. He was never away from Hetty's side; he fetched and carried for her like a dog, he was a slave to her every wish.

Dr. and Mrs. Marshall regarded him with undisguised favor. Tom, the enfant terrible of the family, voted him 'no end jolly,' and Hetty—Hetty liked him well; her eyes brightened when he came, she missed him when he was away; he was so thoughtful, so kind, so good, no one could help being fond of him.

One night there was a storm, and by noon the next day came the news that a great ship from the Cape had gone to pieces on the Razor Rocks, not two miles away. Nothing would do but that Hetty must go and see it. There were no lives lost, they heard, but the lifeboat people must wait till the tide fell before they could get off all the crew, and Hetty was eager to see the rescue. So Huntingdon, of course, volunteered to drive her and Master Tom to the scene of the disaster in Hetty's little pony carriage.

What a drive that was! Wayne will never forget it while he lives. The hedges were all aglow with the June roses and the honeysuckle, and a breath of summer floated up to them from the narrow winding lanes.—The pony was fat and indolent and took its own time. Wayne would not have hurried one of its steps. The sun was setting when they reached the solitary bay where the steamer had run ashore, and a golden glory shone over sky and sea—edging the cloud banks with unearthly splendor, and dyeing with crimson the shallow pools left by the retreating tide. The cliff path to the shore was steep and narrow. Wayne had to help Hetty with a tender care. Perhaps life had never such exquisite pleasure for him before. Her little light shawl lay over his arm, her small hand rested in his clasp. It seemed to him the world was bounded by Hetty.

Never had his heart beat so high with hope. Once she stopped to gather a tiny blue cliff flower, and, after a moment's pause she shyly gave it to him. Was it only the sunset glow that mocked his fancy, or did a delicate color really mount to her cheek at his low spoken word of thanks?

Out, far out on the low, black ledge of cruel rocks lay the great shattered ship.—Little boats plied swiftly and safely across the quiet shallows where the storm waves had raged not many hours ago. Hetty was all excitement to see the rescued people; while Tom, with the frankness of his age and kind, declared aloud that this sort of shipwreck wasn't much good—there wasn't any drowning to be done!

The thoughtful Huntington had, of course, brought a telescope, and stood like the statue of Atlas, while Hetty rested the glass on his shoulder and watched their boats land their burdens at the little fishing pier.

He was in a sort of a rapt dream, hearing dimly Hetty's little ejaculations of pitty over the dedraggled aspect of the shipwrecked, and altogether ignorant Master Tom's somewhat crude chatter, as that youthful torment wetted his feet at the margin of the tide, and gave his opinion with delightful confidence upon matters in general and shipwrecks in particular. The sunset glory grew brighter and more vivid, lighting up the sombre cliffs and level waste of water, and throwing into sharp relief each black stake of the fishing nets which dotted the bosom of the broad bay.

It seemed to Wayne that he would like to stand just so forever—Hetty close to him, he her support and comfort, no one to come between; for Tom certainly did not count for much. Was it not a type of what all their life to come was to be? Crimson glory—Hetty depending on him, his highest happiness to minister to her.

Suddenly into his dream rang a shriek, wild and terrible. The telescope rolled from his shoulder and splashed into a pool at his feet, and as he turned to catch Hetty's fainting figure in his stalwart arms, with one lightning flash his eye fell where her's had rested, and saw, in the crowded boat load just reaching the shore, among the bronzed and bearded faces of the wrecked ship,s crew, the face of Hetty's lost lover—his own brother Jock!

Ah! well, well. Wayne behaved capitally, every one said. 'Old Don behaved like the brick that he is after all,' to use Jack's own expression. He took his brother into partnership, and enabled him to marry Hetty within six weeks—Hetty, to whose pale cheeks the roses had come back, as if by some magic spell. He never married.

'Don was an old bachelor before he was in knickerbockers,' Jack confides sometimes to his wife

People say he means to leave all his money to his niece, little Hetty, who has her mother's eyes. And deep in a secret drawer, carefully treasured from prying eyes, lies a withered scrap of weed, which was once a blue cliff flower, and is all that is left to Huntingdon of his life's one holiday.

THE LIME KILN CLUB.—On motion of Calamity Hastings the matter of a national emblem for the colored race was taken from the table for discussion. He favored a beehive himself, but would not be captious about it.

Prof. Bannister favored the coon as an emblem. It represented industry, vigilance and courage. Colored people were often referred to as coons, anyhow, and the emblem would cut both ways.

Trustee Pullback had given the matter much thought, but his preference was for an old hen sitting on about thirty-four eggs.—If that didn't represent industry and clear grit he didn't know what could.

Samuel Shin had made up his mind that the only emblem he would vote for would be that of a colored man walking in a shady lane with a water melon under each arm.

Sir Isaac Walpole favored the figure of a a black bear; Elder Toots declared in favor of the beaver; Judge Cadaver would have nothing but the figure of a black man waving a plow in one hand, a threshing machine in the other and crying 'Yewreka!'

The discussion promised to bring forth no fruit, when the President put a stop to it by saying:

'Gem'len, at a meetin' of de Committee on Harmony, Art an' Agriculchur', held in de library las' night, an emblem was decided on. It am dat of an eagle seated on de fence between a co'nfield an' a tater patch, while his claws hold a banner on which am inscribed; 'Hard work will bring you plenty of both.'"

The question being upon the adoption of the emblem, the roll was called and it was adopted by a vote of 174 to 8. These emblems will be manufactured here, under the immediate supervision of the club, and furnished to branch lodges at cost.—Detroit Free Press.

ORIGIN OF THE RAILROAD.

The origin of the railroad is by some writers believed to be unknown. There is in the British museum an Egyptian hieroglyphic which represents slaves drawing stones over a road like a primitive tramway. One writer would have us believe that a similar device was known in China many years ago. While it is admitted that printing, gunpowder, and many other things were familiar to the Chinese before they were known to Western civilization, yet it is highly improbable that anything approaching a tramway nearer than a palanquin was known to them. The earliest authentic mention of a railway occurs in the life of Lord Keeper, Roger Forth, early in the seventeenth century. About 1670 a double parallel line of wooden beams was laid at Newcastle-on-Tyne, and a large cart, with four rollers, drawn by horses, was used to transport coal from the mine to the side of the river. A flange placed at the side of the beam kept the carts from rolling off the rail. So successful was the experiment that other coal districts in England and Scotland followed the example. It was a great labor saving scheme, for a horse that could with difficulty draw only 1,700 without the aid of this smooth road could now with ease draw 4,200 weight. This was the earliest tramway, the precursor of the steam railway.—The first improvement made on this tramway was the laying of iron plates on the wooden beams; this contrivance reduced the friction and made less wear and tear. In 1768 rails made wholly of iron were used, and in 1789 when William Yessop built the first public railway in England, at Loughborough, he introduced the edge rail of cast iron and changed the flange from the rail to the wheel. Finally in 1808, the rails were made of malleable iron.

Up to 1808 the tramway had used horses for motors, and in some instances stationary engines; but men's minds had been constantly exercised to invent some method of drawing cars by means of other than cable or animal power. Watt seems to have been the first to conceive the idea of propelling wheeled carriages by steam, but he was so engaged in perfecting the stationary engine that he did not attempt to carry out his idea. William Murdock in 1782, first constructed a model locomotive. Though little more than a toy it worked successfully, and traveled so fast that on one occasion its inventor in vain tried to keep pace with it. In 1802 Richard Trevethick and Andrew Vivian, two Cornwall engineers, took out the first patent ever issued for a locomotive.—All the steam carriages and appliances, however, amounted to almost nothing so far as the public was concerned, and it was not until 1804 that any really practical locomotive was used. Trevethick in this year built a second locomotive in south Wales, which drew a load of ten tons of iron ore 5 miles an hour. From this date, 1804 to 1811, very little, if anything, was done to advance railroads. Time and ingenuity were employed to invent some means to keep cars from slipping when going up an inclined plane. The first really successful engine was invented by George Stephens, in 1814. It ran 6 miles an hour, drawing thirty tons. Until 1829 there was little progress made. Then Robert Stephenson built the Rocket, which attained a maximum speed of twenty and one-half miles, with an average of fifteen.—Brooklyn Eagle.

A CASE OF SQUELCH.—A Chicago drummer balanced his chin on the edge of the seat in front of him, and tickled a sandy-haired passenger's ear with the remark:

'You've been in Chicago, of course?'

'Where?'

'Chicago.'

An uncertain look came into the sandy-haired man's eyes.

'Let me see,' he mused retrospectively; ''pears to me I must have passed through there. I've traveled a good deal. I know I've heard the name before. What line or road is it on?'

'Forty lines of road. It's the biggest railroad centre on earth.'

'Not bigger than Cresline, Ohio, is it?' asked the passenger with an amazed expression. 'I've seen four trains at once at Crestline waitin' to start off. Talk about noise and confusion!'

The Chicago man's teeth began to chatter.

'Is Chicago a place where the train stops for dinner?'

'Naw,' said the disgusted drummer.—'Chicago is not a place where the passengers stop for dinner.'

'Of course, that's what I meant,' explained the red-haired man gently. 'Fact is,' he went on with confidential frankness, 'I've traveled so much and been in so many different places in my lifetime that I don't purtend to remember more'n a quarter of 'em. What's the name of the hotel in Chicago?'

'There ain't any,' said the drummer, gloomily.

Then he walked forward to the filter, filled his mouth full of water, gargled his throat, whooshed the liquid on the floor, and hung his leg over the corner of the box.

'Who is that evil-eyed, pink-haired, lumpy-legged, prairie-eared microbe at the other end of the car?' he asked of the conductor, who was passing through the train.

'Do you mean that gentleman looking out of the window?'

'Ye-as.'

'He's a fish merchant from St. Louis.'

STATESMEN IN BAD HATS.—Most of the Washington "statesmen" wear very bad hats. Randall's is particularly bad, and that of Gen. Logan particularly offensive.—The former rambles through the corridors in an ancient "plug" that looks as if it had been battered all the way from Philadelphia and the latter in a cavalry "slouch" which seems to give pretty good evidence of having been used at a target excursion. Brewster, attorney general, is the most particular man in town about his hats. He has them made to order in Philadelphia, and uses about half a dozen during the season. They are built very high with a bulging crown and a broad brim, and possess the advantage of being equally attractive, no matter which way brushed.

Blaine generally strolls along in a slouch hat, pulled well over his eyes; Chandler always in a derby, while the sprightly Ingalls, of Kansas, carries an opera hat, which he can flop up and down to suit his convenience. President Arthur's hats are models. They are tall silk head coverings, nearly straight, with broad brim and a slight curve near the crown. Mr. Arthur has them made in New York. William Walter Phelps, notwithstanding the elegant cut of his clothes, does not pay much attention to his hats. Some of them could be appropriately worn by the end man at negro-minstrel shows.—New York World.

MAYTIME IN MIDWINTER.

The world, what is it to you dear,
And me, if its face be gray,
And the new-born year be a shrewd year
For flowers that the fierce winds fray?
You smile, and the sky seems blue, dear,
You laugh, and the month turns May.

Your hands through the book shelves flutter;
Scott, Shakespeare, Dickens are caught;
Blake's visions, that lighten and mutter;
Moliere—and his smile has naught
Left on it of sorrow, to utter
The secret things of his thought.

No grim thing written or graven
But grows, if you gaze on it, bright;
A lark's note rings from the raven;
And tragedy's robe turns white;
And shipwrecks drift into haven;
And darkness laughs and is light.

Grief seems but a vision of madness;
Life's key note peals from above
With naught in it more of sadness
Than broods on the heart of a dove
At sight of you thought grows gladness,
And life, through love of you, love.

DEAF AND DUMB.

It was mid-summer on the mountains, and Lilian Ferguson had never seen a fairer scene than the billows of the blue hills that lay stretched out below her, with here and there the flash of half hidden lake or the ribbon like glitter of a tiny river.

She stood leaning against the rustic cedar that formed the support of the hotel piazza, while the modest little trunk and traveling bags were piled up at the rear.

"Don't fret, Miss" said the land lady, who was bustling in and out. "The stage will be along soon."

"Oh, I am in no hurry for the stage," said Lilian, pleasantly. "I could stand and look at this beautiful landscape all day."

"Ain't that strange, now?" reflectively uttered Mrs. Peck, the landlady. "Me and Peck, we never think about it at all."

"Is the stage often so late?" said Lillian, glancing at her neat little silver watch.

"Not generally," said Mrs. Peck. "But to-day they're waiting at Well's Station for the deaf and dumb gentleman."

"For whom?" said Lilian, in amazement.

"For the deaf and dumb gentleman, Miss," explained Mrs. Peck. "A cousin of our minister's up at Crest Hill. He's been down to New York for treatment; but, deary me, there ain't no treatment can do him any good. As deaf as a stone, Miss, and never spoke an intelligible word since he was born. But they do say he's a very learned man, in spite of all his drawbacks."

'I'm afraid he won't be a very lively traveling companion,' said Lilian, smiling.

'No, I calculate not,' said Mrs. Peck in a matter-of-fact sort of way.

Just at that moment a box-wagon drove up, the charioteer handed out a valise and assisted a young lady to alight.

'Has the stage gone?' she cried, flinging aside her veil and revealing a very pretty brunette face shaded by jetty fringes of hair and flushed with excitement.

'You are just in time, Miss,' said Mrs. Peck, peering down the winding road, which her experienced eye could trace when no one else's was of any avail. 'It's a-comin' now!'

But Lilian Ferguson, who had been gazing at the newcomer earnestly, now came forward with an eager smile and an outstretched hand.

'Surely I am not mistaken,' said she, 'and this is Eulalie Morton?'

'Lilian Ferguson! Oh, you darling, I am so glad to see you!' cried the stranger.—'But where on earth did you come from?'

And thus met the two lovely girls who had graduated just a year ago from Madame De Tournaire's fashionable boarding school in New York and who dad not seen each other since.

Just at this moment, however, there was no time for explanations. The ponderous stage, relic of a forgotten generation, rolled up, with creak of leathern curtains, tramp of horses and a general confusion of arrival, to the broad wooden steps of the hotel.

The sun was already down. In the twilight, Eulalie and Lilian could only discover that the stage contained but one other occupant, a man who leaned back in the far corner, with the top of his face partially hidden by a large, wide-brimmed hat, and its lower part wrapped in the folds of a Persian silk pocket handkerchief.

He inclined his head courteously as they entered, and moved a handsome traveling case which lay on the middle seat, as if to make room for them.

'Is there another passenger?' said Miss Morton, with a little, precious start.

'It's ony a deaf and dumb gentleman,' Lilian explained, her eyes full of soft pity. 'The landlady told me all about him.'

'What a nuisance!' cried Eulalie. 'I had hoped we should have the stage to ourselves. But now, dear,' as she settled herself in the most comfortable corner, 'tell me what this unexpected encounter means.'

'It means,' said Lilian, with a shy smile, 'that I am going to be nursery governess at Chessington Hall, up among the Adirondacks—that is, if I give satisfaction. I was engaged by letter from the Educational Bureau a week ago.'

'What a very singular coincidence!' said Miss Morton, shaking her cherry colored bonnet strings. 'And I am going to be companion to old Mrs. Grove, of Grove Rookery, the very next place to Chessington Hall.—How I do envy you, Lilian!'

'Envy me, Eulalie?'

'Yes. Haven't you heard about it?' said the brunette. 'The Chessington children, your future charges, are motherless, don't you know? They are under the care of an aunt, so Mrs. Grove told me; and there is a handsome widower and interesting young bachelor at Chessington Hall.'

Lilian colored, hotly.

'Neither of whom I ever expect to meet," said she.

'It will be your own fault if you don't,' observed Miss Morton. 'Why, my dear, here is your career all chalked out for you. Sentimental widower, with lots of money—pretty governess—mutual fascination—growing devotion—finale, a wedding! Hey! presto, your fortune is made!'

'Eulalie, how can you talk so?' cried Lilian, flushed and indignant. 'I am not on a husband-hunting expedition; I am simply trying to earn my own living.'

'The more goose you, to neglect such an opportunity as this,' said Eulalie, laughing. 'If you don't try for the widower I shall.—Grove Rookery is only half a mile from Chessington Hall, after all; and a rich husband would solve the problem of my life at once.'

'This is too ridiculous, Eulalie,' said Lilian. 'I could not respect myself if I were to plot and plan like this. I know it is unjust, but you have made me dislike Mr. Chessington already.'

'The more the better,' said Miss Morton. 'There will be all the better chance for me. They say he is very handsome, and one could easily send the two children away to boarding school. I can assure you I'll have no old maids, aunts and interfering uncles about the premises.'

'Eulalie, let us talk of something else,' said Lilian, resolutely. 'Tell me all that has happened to you since graduation day.'

Eulalie laughed out a merry, ringing laugh.

'Well, if you must know,' she said, 'I've been trying my best to get a nice husband, but without any success.'

'Is matrimony, then, the end and aim of all the world?' said Lilian, with queenly disdain.

'As far as I am concerned—yes,' acknowledged Miss Morton, with charming frankness.

'Pardon me, Eulalie,' said Lilian, 'but it seems to me that you have degenerated frightfully since those dear old days of Madame de Tournaire's.'

Miss Morton yawned.

'How tedious all this is!' said she. 'Miss Ferguson turned lecturer, eh? How I wish that poor fellow in the corner wasn't deaf and dumb! I'd flirt with him, just to aggravate you, Lily!'

Lilian made no answer. She leaned her head out of the stage window, and watched the purple dusk creep up the mountain sides, counting the stars as one by one they shone out. Anything was better than Eulalie's shallow clatter.

Grove Rookery was soon reached, and Miss Morton bade her old school-mate an effusive farewell.

'I see that the old lady has sent the carriage to meet me,' said she. 'Good-bye, Lily! You must be sure to introduce me to the charming widower when I come over. au revoir, darling—au revoir!'

The deaf and dumb gentleman left the stage very soon. Miss Ferguson watched with some interest, but no carriage of any description seemed to be waiting for him.

He disappeared into the woods like a shadow, and vanished from her sight.

'I suppose, poor fellow, that he lives near here,' thought she. 'How dreadful it must be thus to be cut off from all companionship with one's fellow being!'

But even while these reflections passed through her mind, the stage stopped again before a glittering facade of lights half veiled in summer foliage—Chessington Hall!

'Here you are, Miss," said the man who was driving.

Through the summer evening dusk, Lilian could see the marble-railed terrace and the broad carriage drive, while two childish figures danced up and down, and uttered joyful exclamations of welcome—little Blanche and Alice Chessington!

'Are you the new governess?' said they. 'Are you Miss Ferguson? Welcome—welcome to the Adirondecks! We are so glad that you have come!'

And in an instant their arms were twined around Lilian's neck.

At the end of a month Lilian Ferguson felt completely and thoroughly at home with her new pupils.

They had ranged the woods, and visited all the grottoes and cascades; they had surrounded her with an atmosphere of the sweetest affection.

Mrs. Hartleigh, their aunt, was equally kind; and Alfred Hartleigh, the interesting young uncle, had already taken her into his confidence as to the beautiful bride he was going to bring home soon.

But it certainly was very strange that she had never seen Adrian Chessington himself, the father of her lovely little pupils.

Until one pleasant morning, when, just as she had come out to receive Miss Eulalie Morton, who had driven over in the Grove Rookery carriage to call, a tall, handsome gentleman entered the room, with Mrs. Hartleigh on his arm.

"The deaf and dumb gentleman!" Lilian involuntarily exclaimed.

"Poor fellow, so it is!" said Miss Morton, who advanced airily, shaking out the light muslin flounces of her dress. 'How he does haunt us, to be sure!'

'Ladies,' said the deaf-and-dumb gentleman, 'you are mistaken. I can hear and speak to day as well as anybody. I should have spoken to you a month ago in the stage coach if it had not been for the unfortunate circumstances of my having been to the dentist and had my lower jaw broken in the extraction of a double tooth. I perceived that you were mistaking me for my unfortunate friend, Mr. Danton, a deaf mute who lives near here; but he had been detained until the next day, and with my bandaged jaw it was impossible for me to speak and explain matters.'

Eulalie Morton's face glowed scarlet. She literally knew not what to say. But Lilian Ferguson stood calm and unmoved.

'Then,' she said, smiling, 'all our sympathy was thrown away upon you.'

He inclined his head.

'Exactly,' he said. 'I found the next day that it was necessary to put myself under the care of an Albany surgeon, so that I have been a sort of exile for a few weeks. Pardon my being so late to welcome you to Chessington Hall. But the welcome is none the less warm because it is tardy.'

Eulalie Morton never came to Chessington Hall again, nor could she so much as think of her conversation in the stage that night without hot indignation at herself.

'What a fool I was!' she cried.

Mr. Chessington, however, much as he liked and admired Lilian Ferguson, never asked her to marry him.

'When I was widowed once it was forever,' he said.

And Lilian never coveted the prize of her heart; perhaps because she was engaged to a rising young clergyman, near Philadelphia.

'If only I had Lily's opportunities!' said Miss Morton. 'But I wrecked my chances when I spoke out my mind so freely before the deaf-and-dumb gentleman!'

AMERICA'S WINE PRODUCTION.—America promises to become the greatest wine-producing country in the world. Ten years from now our annual wine product will probably amount to 100,000,000 gallons. Even then the industry will be only in its infancy. California is a great wine state but as yet she has cultivated very little of her grape area. There are three great wine centers in this country. The first is the Pacific slope, the second is the Piedmont region, or tablelands between the Alleghenies and the Blue Ridge Virginia, the Carolinas, Georgia and parts of Kentucky and Tennessee, the Indian territory, with large parts of New Mexico, Arizona, Arkansas, Kansas, Texas, Missouri, Ohio and New York. We have 100 acres adapted to grapes for every one acre that France can show.—Chicago Herald.

EBENSBURG, PA.,

FRIDAY, - - - JANUARY 23, 1885.

THE committee in charge of the inauguration ceremonies at Washington has selected General McClellan as Grand Marshal. General Hancock was first designated, but felt constrained to decline in consequence of the recent death of his son in Mississippi. The Democracy of the country will endorse the choice of McClellan, the leading Union General who is a member of the Democratic party.

CHIEF JUSTICE WAITE left Washington on Tuesday last for Florida and will be absent for some time. He goes for the benefit of his health which has been very poorly for several months. John Kelly, the boss of Tammany Hall, will also turn his face towards Florida in a few days in search of the same precious boon. It is said that Mr. Kelly, who never does anything by halves, overworked himself during the closing days of the late Presidential campaign, and has not since its close been a well man.

IF there are enough Democratic members of Congress so intent upon getting money for their districts through the River and Harbor bill, or the different bills for erecting postoffices and other public buildings, that they will so shape their course as to prevent the passage of any of the necessary appropriation bills, and thus compel Mr. Cleveland to call an extra session at the beginning of his administration, they will be visited with the consuming wrath and blue brimstone curses of every true and honest Democrat in the land.

STATE SENATOR LEWIS R. EMERY, of McKean county, who is a loyal Republican, but at the same time the most bitter anti-Cameron man in the State, openly asserts that he furnished six hundred dollars to Thomas V. Cooper, Chairman of the Republican State Committee, to aid Blaine's election; that Cooper diverted the money from its intended purpose and spent it in securing the election of Cameron's friends to the Legislature. Emery also makes the charge that Cooper even sent some of the money into his own (Emery's) district to defeat him, owing to his well known hostility to Cameron. Cooper denies the last allegation, but judging the size of Hercules from the dimensions of his foot its looks like the very thing that Cooper would do. He is a wonderfully tricky politician and in ways that are dark is hard to beat.

THE Pittsburg Post of Wednesday last says: The financial troubles of the Oliver Bros. are in a fair way of adjustment that will enable the firm to continue operations and secure the creditors.—The list of total liabilities presented at the meeting of creditors yesterday aggregated $2,410,000, and the assets are stated at $3,578,000. The firm proposes to adjust the liabilities in yearly payments of one-fifth, commencing February 1, 1886, and ending February 1, 1890; giving six per cent. notes therefor, secured by a mortgage on all real estate owned by the two firms in Allegheny and Westmoreland counties.—The individual indebtedness to be extended on the same terms. A committee of the creditors recommend the acceptance of these terms, and the negotiations, it is presumed, will be ratified at an adjourned meeting of creditors to be held to-morrow. These proceedings, as usually stated about little affairs of honor, are honorable to all the parties concerned.

JOHN P. ST. JOHN, the late Prohibition candidate for President, has published a lengthy letter, denying in the most positive and absolute terms the charges made against him by the Republican press, that he offered to withdraw, or at least to conduct his canvass in the interest of Blaine, if the National Republican Committee would pay him $25,000, and that the Committee having refused to do so, he was paid by the Democratic Committee to stay on the track and make it lively for Blaine and the Republicans. J. S. Clarkson, editor of the Des Moines (Iowa) Register, and also a member of the Republican National Committee, and J. B. McCullagh, editor of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, a Republican paper, started these charges against St. John, have persisted in them and have asserted that they could prove them, but neither of them has ever offered a spark of evidence in support of their allegations except a letter from Jim Legate, of Kansas, to one R. C. Kerens, of St. Louis, which Legate says is "a cold-blooded forgery." St. John has publicly invited Clarkson and McCullagh, two or three times, to publish any evidence they have in support of their allegations, and until they do so, all honorable men will acquit him of the charges they have preferred against him.

THE two houses of the Legislature of this State voted for U. S. Senator on Tuesday afternoon. The vote was as follows: In the Senate, Cameron, 28; Wm. A. Wallace, 18; Agnew and Emery, Republicans, voted for Acheson, of Washington county, and Congressman Wm. D. Kelley. In the House the vote was, for Cameron, 135; Wallace, 50; Shiras, 1; Kelley, 1; Brumm, 1. Cameron had a majority of 90 of all the votes cast. In the Senate Mr. Lee, of Venango, who would not have voted for Cameron, was absent owing to sickness.—Mr. Wallace was also absent. The two houses met in joint convention on Wednesday, the journals were read and the certificates of Cameron's election signed. There is a big difference when regarded as proper Senatorial timber between Cameron and Wallace, for the plain reason that the latter has proven himself fit to be in the Senate, while the former never has and never will. Roscoe Conkling, who served with Wallace in the Senate and fully appreciated his abilities, once said of him in a speech, that he never started out on a political hunt "with a brass band."

A BILL was before the Legislature at its last session fixing the salaries of all county officers in counties containing over forty and less than sixty thousand inhabitants, but no final action was taken on it. The provisions of the bill applied to nineteen counties, Cambria being one of them, and a similar bill has been introduced into the Senate since the present session began two weeks ago. The salaries are fixed as follows: Sheriff, $3,000; Prothonotary, $2,000; Clerk of Orphans' Court, $1,000; Clerk of Quarter Sessions, $1,000; Register, $1,500; Recorder, $1,500; Treasurer, $2,000; District Attorney, $1,200; Coroner, $1,000; County Commissioner, $600; Jailer, $700. This bill will answer its purpose in regard to the counties enumerated in it in which the offices of Register, Recorder and Clerk of the Orphans' Court are separate and distinct and not all three held by the same person, as is the case with Cambria. As the bill stands in its present shape the salary of the Register, Recorder and Clerk of the Orphans' Court in this county would be $4,000, and we think that no man will contend that this is not too much. By the terms of the bill the salary of the Prothonotary and Clerk of the Sessions is fixed at $3,000, and the pay of the Register, &c., ought to be the same. We call the attention of Senator Boggs to this matter now so that he can have a proviso inserted in the bill, if he concurs in our views, limiting the salary of the Register, Recorder and Clerk of the Orphans' Court, when all three offices are held by the same person, to $3,000. The salary of $1,000 fixed by the bill for the Coroner is exhorbitant beyond all measure, and it would be the right thing to limit that officer's compensation either to the fees which the law now prescribes for him, or else fix his salary at a reasonable sum. When we can procure a printed copy of the bill we may have something more to say about it.

THE Republican members of the New York Legislature met in caucus on last Monday evening, and nominated William M. Evarts, the well known New York lawyer, for U. S. Senator, the vote standing 61 for Evarts, 28 for Morton, and 3 for Depew. This is one of the few instances of late years in a northern State in which the longest purse has failed to win the Senatorial prize. Morton being now Minister to France, and a very rich man, was, of course, not present at Albany to manage his own case, but he had able and skilled representatives on the ground to take care of his interests, and if they were as liberally supplied with the sinews of war as it was universally believed they would be, his defeat is most remarkable and can alone be attributed to the worst kind of management. As Morton, however, had nothing to back him up except his money, it is a satisfaction to know that a majority of the Republicans, even in a New York Legislature, were proof against its seductive influence. Mr. Evarts was Attorney General during a porton of Andrew Johnson's administration, and Secretary of State for a considerable portion of Hayes' fraudulent term. Johnson appointed him because he was his ablest counsel when he was impeached before the Senate by Thaddeus Stevens, Ben. Butler and a few other Republican fanatics, and Hayes placed him at the head of his administration because he assisted in urging his case before the 8 to 7 Electoral Commission, and aided in putting him into the office to which Samuel J. Tilden had been elected.

CONGRESSMAN WM. D. KELLEY, of Philadelphia, "Pig Iron Kelley," as he is familiarly called, in a conversation in Washington the other day about the present hard times and the assertion made in the House last Saturday by Hiscock, a Republican member from New York, that they were precipitated upon the country by Cleveland's election, said that had he been present in the House he would have taken issue with Hiscock, and told the House and the country that Cleveland's election had nothing to do with the matter. He said he had reached the age of three score and ten and was too old to be swayed by political considerations.—The trouble was deep seated and world wide, and Cleveland's election could have no connection with the over-production and consequent depression of business in Great Britain, Austria and other European countries. "I should have inquired," said Judge Kelley, "what the election of Cleveland had to do with the depreciation of the value of real estate in England some ninety per cent." He said that the introduction of machinery had revolutionized the world; that the present social conditions are worn out and that we are on the eve of such a far-reaching crisis as that which destroyed the feudal system and brought about the French revolution. He says he has no remedy to suggest, but holds that something must be done very quickly to avert impending disaster.

A BILL has been introduced into the State Senate by Mr. Adams, of Philadelphia, for the infliction of corporal punishment upon all male persons convicted of wilfully beating their wives, or beating any other female person.—The offender is to receive upon his bare back, by means of a whip or lash (well laid on, of course,) not exceeding thirty lashes, the punishment to be inflicted in the prison yard by the Sheriff or his deputy, and in the presence only of a physician and the prison keeper. This bill ought to pass inasmuch as it provides for the only adequate punishment of a class of brutes in the shape of men, who are a disgrace to human nature. If a good, sound welting administered by an able-bodied, vigorous man, isn't a very mild punishment for a cruel and an unfeeling wretch who raises his hand against his wife or against any other woman, then Shakespeare, who sounded all the depths and shoals of human nature, was sadly mistaken in his judgment when he said that the man "who lays his hand upon a woman, save in the way of kindness, is a coward whom it were base flattery to call a villain."—We will look for Senator Boggs, of this district, to give this meritorious and long needed measure his active assistance in getting it safely through the Senate.

"AS DEAD AS CÆSAR."

The Iowa State Register says: Prof. A. L. Perry, of Williams College, has written an article for the Million, of this city, in which he declares the Republican party dead as Cæsar. We give his exact language:

> "It is as certain as anything in the future can be, that the party will never go into another Presidential election. A party bearing that name may possibly and even probably enter the next Presidential canvass, but if so, it will be wholly a different organization in its structure and purposes and leaders from that which has just been defeated. It is no answer to this prediction to say, that the Republican pary cast more votes the other day than ever before in its history. The great Whig party cast more votes in 1852 than ever before in its history, but for all that it never went into another Presidential contest, and its very name perished before there was another Presidential contest.

This is a very striking prediction. At first blush it seems extravagant, but if we examine the Professor's reasons, as adduced in the article, we are not so much surprised at his conclusion. His vigorous English leaves no obscurity on the subject in hand. For instance, to begin with the course of the party in the recent campaign he says:

> Virtually, the only inducement offered to the people to vote the Republican ticket was that the party in power would, if continued in power, zealously keep up and heap on the shoulders of the people the present burdens of national taxation.

And then in righteous indignation he exclaims:

> "What a boon for a great political party to offer to a sensitive and enterprising people fettered in every economic action at home, worse taxed than any other nation in Christendom, already thrown off the ocean as far as shipping is concerned, excluded to their manufactures from every foreign port, and depressed and barrassed as never before in every industry and enterprise! What a worn out party they must have been, how empty of principles and oblivious of all obligations to the Million, to have nothing to say of sound significance whatever as a ground for continuance of power, except 'We'll tax you, men and brethern, to the utmost of our power and to the very limit of our lives!'

Sure enough. And then when Prof. Perry goes on to mention that all the great privilege corporations were marshalled on that side, this feature culminating in the "golden dinner at Delmonico's," we see the blessed tie that binds the whole combination together and makes a god of taxation. "In one word" he says, "the party has been shown by that dinner and its sequels to be aristocratic and plutocratic, and the Many started up against the Few. A thrill went thro' the land, and a will was born in a day to thwart the privilege and to stand for equality. Their rights and no more for the rich; their rights and no less for the poor. No party in a free country could stand such an exhibition as that was, and least of all the Republican party, whose drift towards privilege has been pronounced for twenty years. It is doomed to die for its manifold sins against equality. Let it die. And echo answers, "Let it die."

We have space only for an extract of that portion of the article relating events occurring since the election, which confirm Prof. Perry's horoscope. The party "knew," he says, "that one defeat was death, and so it refused for a week to acknowledge defeat." In conclusion: "They died very hard, and accordingly they died very dead. The whole country observed their unreasonable contortions and made a careful note of the death rattle too long deferred."

The Professor concludes with a prediction that the Democratic party will be impelled by the force of circumstances and of public opinion to adopt a policy of free trade, and thus it will obtain a hold on the country that will last through several administrations.

It is not often distinguished men of letters like Professor Perry venture such bold political predictions, and his words will be widely heeded. Inasmuch as Prof. Perry is as well known, the world over, as any writer on public questions in America, and has been the college teacher of many of our leading public men, including Garfield, his predictions of the Republican party cannot be rejected or hooted at. But then they won't fill the people with unmitigated sadness.

IRELAND'S IMPROVED CONDITION.—The London correspondent of the New York World had an interview on Sunday with Mr. William O'Brien, editor of United Ireland, and a member of Parliament for Mallow, in the county Cork. In answer to a question by the correspondent as to the condition of the people in Ireland, Mr. O'Brien said: "The prospects of the Irish peasantry were never better than they are at the present moment. There have been many winters before this when it has required desperate means to obtain food and fuel. Thank God, that is over.—The Irish people are now so situated that they can take care of themselves and each other, and that is about all they have ever asked. Come what may, there will be no more famine in Ireland to appeal to the benevolence of the rest of the world. The farmers have learned the lesson taught for so many years by Charles Parnell, that they must secure for themselves and for their children a decent means of support, they, as a rule, striving to support themselves properly. The landlords now recognize the fact that the support of the family is the first charge upon the rental of a farm, and their claims upon the land are gradually slipping away from them. Their interest in the farms is worth but little now and it is decreasing year by year. The level of comfort in Irish farmers' homes has been distinctly raised within the last few years, and Ireland will never again be compelled to go, cap in hand, to ask America or any other power to keep her people from starving.

TEXAS' PUBLIC SCHOOLS.—No State in the union surpasses Texas in the munificence with which she has endowed her public schools. The people are fully alive to the importance of education, and the school buildings in the large cities are fully equal to any in the North. The State Superintendent says that the constantly increasing demand for good teachers affords excellent opportunities for professionals to locate in Texas. The salaries of city and town superintendents range from $1,200 to $2,500 per annum, the salaries of teachers from a minimum of $20 to a maximum of $100 per month. The State normal institutes are insufficient to supply the extraordinary demand for good teachers at present prevailing in the State; and such teachers as favor liberal salaries and generous treatment will be assured a position. The communities are rapidly increasing, and the liberal State suupport is an inducement to the immediate organization of a school in each community, hence the demand for teachers is constantly increasing and it is an indisputable fact that the efficiency of the new system will not be complete until thorough, practical and efficient teachers are the great majority, instead of in the minority as at present.

IN the U. S. Senate a few days ago, Mr. Hoar, of Massachusetts, presented a petition from Belva A. Lockwood, praying Congress to see that the votes cast for her at the late Presidential election be counted. Mrs. Lockwood, who is a burlesque on her sex, is becoming entirely too numerous and ought to be suppressed as an intolerable nuisance.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

From our regular Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19, 1885.

During the past week the debates and acts of Congress have touched a variety of subjects. The French Spoliation bill, which was first brought up eighty-three years ago, has passed both houses, and the Nicaraguan bill, which opens up the widest and gravest possibilities, has just been debated. Jefferson Davis and Tecumseh Sherman have both revisited the glimpses of the moon, and the Senate has voted to restore General Grant to his rank in the army. There was considerable surprise expressed at the fact that Democratic Senators voted with the Republicans to restore General Grant, but more surprise will be expressed if the Democratic House shall allow the bill to become a law.

Human idolatry never reached a more supreme depth than in its worship of Grant. The country does not owe as much to him as it does to hundreds of others. But because he has lost his ill gotten fortune through stupidity and fraud, and his wonderful health through prolonged dissipation, the Senate, a portion of the press, and a herd of millionaires dissolve into maudlin pity over an example of spurious greatness to which history furnishes no parallel.

There are decided objections against restoring Gen. Grant to his rank in the army. The last time he held power as President of the United States, he used it to disperse Southern legislatures and to overawe opposition to the fraudulent seizure in the presidency by conspirators of 1876. The Edmunds bill proposes to place him only on the retired list of generals, but the Supreme Court has decided that the retired list is as much a part of the army as the active list, and the latter may at any time be called into service.

Suppose there should be another disputed election, as in 1876, or like that which occurred only last November.—How easy and how natural (had another than Arthur been in the White House) would it have been for Blaine to summon Grant, as senior general, to assume command. And with his name and prestige, and the fanatacism of his idolators, the crime and shame of 1876 might have been repeated. History never repeats itself, but folly and crime are perpetual. These dangers may be treated as trivialties, since they are not imminent, but it will be the part of folly to make them even remotely possible by placing Grant again in the army.

There is a disposition on the democratic side here in both houses to do nothing at this short session except pass the appropriation bills. The remaining days of the session are so few and the appropriation bills still to be considered are so many that this postponement to another Congress of all legislation will be easy to accomplish.

It is not among the impossibilities that there may be an extra session, and, for a number of reasons, it need not be deprecated. As it is now, more than a year commonly intervenes between the election of Congressmen and the beginning of their duties. This fact has frequently been commented upon as opposed to the spirit of our laws, and objectionable. The election and the service should be brought nearer together, either by spring elections, or spring session. There is certainly no reason why of two men elected to co-ordinate public trusts at the same time, one should enter upon office on the fourth of March and the other on the first Monday of the following December.

But apart from the abstract questions involved, it will scarcely be disputed by those at all familiar with the work now thrust upon Congress, that its ordinary sessions are of inadequate length to enable it to cope with its legitimate business. It is true that much time is now wasted, and that more would be if the sessions were longer, but that does not argue that Congress should not give itself a fair chance to do its work.

The President's social duties have kept him busy during the past week, and are likely to employ his evenings for some time to come. He has abandoned all hope of visiting the New Orleans Exposition in an official capacity, and has so notified the board of managers. He expects, however, to make a short visit to the Exposition after the fourth of March, and then, of course, he will go as a private citizen. He had hoped to attend the Exposition during the month of February, and had consequently refrained from extending his engagements into that month. K.

BUSINESS DEPRESSION AND POLITICS.—It is surprising that the Republicans have waited so long to proclaim that the present general depression in business is attributable to their defeat at the recent election.

The cry was raised on Saturday in Congress when Mr. Hoar declared that the business troubles of the country were mainly due to distrust of the Democratic party.

He might just as truly say that distrust of the Democratic party caused the wind to blow fifty miles an hour the other day, or caused the destruction of a Long Island factory by lightning in January.

The business troubles of the country began long before the election of a Democratic President, and when there was every prospect of a continuanc of Republican power. They originated in causes with which political parties have nothing to do, and they will terminate without regard to political influences.

The attempt to make the Democrats responsible for the existing depression in business is demagogism pure and simple.—N. Y. Sun.

—About three months ago John Kelly, a peddler, of Allegheny, who had a route thro' the country, which he went over with a horse and wagon, very mysteriously disappeared during one of his trips. He left home as usual, and since then not the slightest trace of the man has been obtained, though detectives have been at work upon the case. About one month ago Joseph Richell, Mrs. Kelly's nephew, obtained a horse and wagon and took up his uncle's business to dispose of a lot of stock left by him. He made one trip over the route, and was so much pleased with the business that he decided to follow it permanently. About two weeks ago he started out with a fresh supply of goods. Since then nothing has been seen or heard of him, and his disapperance is also a profound mystery. As both men were liable to have considerable sums of money about them besides the goods, Mrs. Kelly greatly fears they have been robbed and murdered.

A Remarkable Case.

DR. HARTMAN—Dear Sir: I am induced by a sense of duty to the suffering to make a brief statement of your remarkable cure of myself I was a most miserable sufferer from various and distressing diseases, which caused me to be confined to my bed for a long time, being too weak to bear my weight upon my feet. I was treated by the most reputable physicians in our city, each and all saying they could do nothing for me. I had given up all hope of ever being well again. In this condition I began to take your Manalin and Peruna, and am most happy to say that in three months I was perfectly well, entirely cured without any appliances or supports of any kind.

Yours truly, MRS. HENRY ELLIS,
502 Scott street, Milwaukee, Wis.

—William J. St. Clair, chief clerk in the sub-postoffice in West Philadelphia, was arrested on Tuesday on the charge of misappropriating three vouchers of $24.50 each, and $26.40 in cash belonging to the Government. He was held for a further hearing to-morrow.

—Isaac Lay's colliery at Centralia, Schuylkill county, suspended operations on Monday, throwing several hundred hands out of employment. The Logan and Centralia collieries, operated by Louis A. Riley & Co., will resume on Wednesday next. They will employ about 1,000 men and boys.

—While a German woman living near Ten-Mile river Pa., was returning home from a store one evening recently, she saw a dark object in the road which she supposed might be her husband, but it wasn't. As she spoke a big bear turned his head toward her. She dropped the sack of flour she was carrying and ran.

—James Lindsay, an employe of the railroad shops at Wellsville, O., had a narrow escape from a terrible death on Friday last. Lindsey is a boiler-maker and was at work inside a locomotive boiler, when his clothing took fire from a small lamp. His fellow workmen quickly rescued him from his perilous position, but not before his face, arms and neck were terribly burned.

—About noon on Tuesday a northern bound train on the Ohio & Mississippi Railroad, while crossing a trestle bridge a few miles below Fairfield, Illinois, was thrown from the track and fell to the ground, a distance of 10 feet, overturning a passenger car containing 17 passengers. It is reported that several persons were killed and a large number seriously injured, but up to this time no particulars have been received.

—The explosion of a lard rendering tank in J. E. Booger & Co.'s pork packing house at Sioux City, Iowa, on Tuesday morning last, threw down a portion of the main building. The part leveled was four stories high and 50x80 feet. It included the killing, scalding, scraping, rendering and fertilizer rooms. The explosion occurred just before 7 o'clock, the hour at which the men go to work, and comparatively few were in that part of the building.

—The Karl family, prominent Adventists of Creston, Iowa, are still looking for the end of the world. The men have thrown up their positions and will not work. Their Bibles are constantly before them, and they are shut up in their houses waiting for the end to come. There are twelve in all, men, women and children. It is rumored that one young girl, who is not a believer, is to be offered up as a sacrifice. The community fears that these religious cranks will close the programme with a tragedy, and the police are watching them closely.

—The residence of George Majors, a farmer, residing about three miles north of Rochester, Pa., was robbed of a wallet containing about $250 at a late hour last Friday afternoon. Mr. Majors is a man near eighty years of age. During the past summer he has had in employ a German named Stein, who came to the neighborhood a few months ago, and who left Mr. Majors' employ about the first of January. He then left the neighborhood and nothing was seen of him until Thursday, when he returned and went to Mr. Majors' house, from which place he disappeared on Friday, about the the same time the loss of the money was discovered.

—One cold winter night in 1882, in Lincoln county, Tenn., sixteen miles from Fayetteville, an old man named Mike Dolin came to a neighbor's house, saying his wife had been murdered while he was out of the house. The woman was found dead. Dolin was suspected, tried and convicted on circumstantial evidence, and sentenced to be hanged. The Supreme Court remanded the case, no motive being shown, and Dolin was again convicted, and the case was to come up next week. On Monday a dying confession was received from a man in Alabama, acknowledging the murder and the theft of a roll of money missed at that time. Dolin is 82 years old.

—Thirty-nine lashes and the signing of an affidavit that he was a malicious liar, is the penalty which G. W. Murphy, of Americus, Ga., has just paid for slanderous remarks concerning a respectable lady. On January 8th, Murphy told a tale to several companions, which was subsequently conveyed to the friends of the lady. They decided to hold Murphy to account. He was first taken to the office of Clerk Pillsbury, of the Superior Court, where he affixed his signatur to a card saying that what he had said was a "base and malicious falsehood." He was then taken to a secluded spot, where, his shoulders being bared, a cowhide was used with such effect as to draw yells from the wretch.

—Klagenfurt, the Capital of the province of Carinthia, Southern Austria, was visited by an avalanche on Monday, which wrecked several buildings, killed twenty inhabitants and injured many others, who are also rendered homeless. All efforts to rescue the buried are futile. A dispatch from Trieste says many residents of the place are missing and it is believed they are buried under the snow, in addition to the twenty already known to be killed. The city authorities are exerting themselves vigorously to ascertain the fate of the missing, and three thousand men are digging through the snow to rescue the imprisoned and recover the dead.

ALL FOR NOTHING.
WHY THE DOCTOR WAS DISGUSTED, AND WHAT MIGHT HAVE DONE WITHOUT HIM.

"Well, wife," said Dr. E——, as he entered his house, which was situated in a cosy village in central New York, "I have got back from a long and dreary ride away down among the mountains, and all to no purpose whatever. The messenger said the man wouldn't live till morning, when the fact is he had only an ordinary attack of colic. If the simpletons had only had sense enough to put a BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTER on his stomach he would have been all right in an hour or two. But some folks are slow to learn," added the old physician, swallowing the cup of steaming tea his wife had just poured for him.

Dr. E—— was right; yet people do learn, even though slowly. The rapidly increasing use of Benson's plaster proves this beyond question, and the good doctors are certain to be saved much of their needless toil. In all diseases capable of being affected by a plaster Benson's acts efficiently and at once. The genuine have the word CAPCINE cut in the centre. Price 25 cents.

Lieutenant Jones was badly wounded in one of the engagements fought in Virginia and never fully recovered from its effects. He was a clerk for many years in the Treasury Department and subsequently engaged in the drug business in Washington. —The Postmaster General has ordered that hereafter postmasters shall forward, at the request of the party addressed, and without additional charge for postage, letters which have one full rate (two cents) paid thereon, parcels prepaid at first class rates, postal cards, and newspapers of the second class which are forwarded to subscribers from one postoffice to another in the same county in which the paper is published and in whole or in part printed; but all other matter when forwarded must be charged with additional postage at the rate that would be charged thereon if originally mailed at the office forwarding the same, and the postmaster forwarding such matter shall endorse thereon "postage due for forwarding —— cents," and it shall be the duty of the postmaster at the office of final delivery to affix to the matter so forwarded postage due stamps sufficient to cover the deficient postage and in all cases collect the amount before delivery.

—In West township, Huntingdon county, in what is known as Diamond Valley, a region which is rarely visited by any person except hunters, a most brutal murder was perpetrated on Friday last. John Gardner, the murderer, is twenty-seven years old, and resided with his father-in-law, George Warfield; the other members of the family being Mrs. Gardner and her infant child, and Lizzie Warfield and her babe. Gardner is a lazy, drunken fellow, and his conduct brought about an altercation with Mr. Warfield, who was eighty years of age. Gardner grew furious, and picking up a heavy club, struck the old man on the back of the head, crushing his skull and killing him instantly. Mrs. Warfield was the only witness of the murder. Gardner threatened to kill her also if she told it, and the story was given out that the old man came to his death by falling from the barn. But after the funeral, which occurred on Saturday, Mrs. Warfield could keep the terrible secret no longer, and related the facts to the neighbors. Gardner was arrested on Saturday night and is now in jail at Huntingdon.

DEATH IN A BURNING HOUSE.—On Monday afternoon the dwelling house of Mr. Samuel Beers, of Reade township, took fire and was burned to the ground, and his little son, aged about three years, sad to relate, perished in the flames. The little boy and a babe were in a room together, the mother was attending to her duties in the kitchen, and Mr. Beers was out at work some distance from the house. The supposition is that the little boy must have set fire to the carpet in playing at the stove. When Mrs. Beers first discovered it the room was full of smoke, and she seized the baby, carried it to a place of safety and returned, but the air had fanned the fire into flames and she was too late to save her boy, the room being completely enveloped in a sheet of fire. Mr. Beers and several neighbors hurried to the scene, but it was too late to attempt the rescue of his child as the poor little fellow was no doubt then beyond the reach of human aid. Portions of his charred remains were recovered after the building was burned. The house was owned by the U. S. Government and was valued at $1,000. No insurance.

MEXICAN VETERANS.

As a matter of local interest we publish below a list of the old Cambria Guards, who left this place thirty-seven years ago to serve their country in its war with Mexico. Twenty-one of those gallant men never returned—the dust of eighteen of them lies peacefully mingling with the invaded soil, and three of them found their last resting place at New Orleans. One by one those who have returned have been dropping off, until to-day—out of the eighty-five men who left here on the 2nd day of January, 1847, in the full health and vigor of life—but twenty-two are still living, and we give their place of residence as near as it can be ascertained. We also publish a song written at the time of their departure by Hon. Robert L. Johnston. Another song of welcome was written by the same gentleman on the return of the Company from Mexico, on the 18th July 1848, but at present we cannot get a copy. SONG OF THE CAMBRIA GUARDS.

(AIR: 'Dandy Jim.')

Adieu! to peace and all her charms!
Our country calls "to arms! to arms!"
Arouse and seek your nation's foe
Upon the plains of Mexico!

And who that voice shall disobey
When honor calls him far away;
Or who, through base and coward fear
Refuse to be a volunteer.

'Tis true we've many miles to roam,
'Tis true we leave a happy home
And for us many a tear shall flow
When we depart for Mexico.

But though our destiny be far,
And peaceful life exchanged for war;
And though we cause full many a tear
Our country bids us volunteer.

Our country's standard high unfurled,
The pride, the wonder of the world;
That honored standard bids us go,
To join the fight in Mexico.

And when that flag is raised on high
And proudly floating to the sky;
What freeman thinks his home so dear
As not to be a volunteer.

And though full many a weary day
From friend's and home were doomed to stay
And though grim death may lay us low
Upon the plains of Mexico;

Our country still asserts a claim
On every patriotic name;
And bids us in the ranks appear,
With those who bravely volunteer.

When, care-worn with fatigue and toil
We sink upon a Southern soil,
The thoughts of home will cause a glow,
Upon our cheeks in Mexico.

We'll think of those whose open hand
Gave comfort to our little band;
Their weary pilgrimage to cheer,
And animate each volunteer.

And should the ball by foeman sped
The soldier number with the dead
Until his life blood cease to flow
And stain the soil of Mexico;

For home will be the final prayer
He offers to his Maker there;
And home shall claim the latest tear
Of every dying volunteer.

But should we share a happier fate
And friends our safe return await
We'll bless the hour that bade us go
To meet the fight in Mexico.

Our country served our honors bright
Our land victorious in the fight,
Returned to home and friends so dear
How happy is each volunteer.

Adieu! our mountain home, adieu,
Adieu! dear friends, we part with you;
Our gallant country bids us go
To join her friends in Mexico.

Adieu! the comforts of our lives;
Adieu! our sweethearts and our wives,
Adieu! to all we hold most dear
Our country bids us volunteer.

LARGEST TOBACCO MANUFACTORY IN THE WORLD.—Consumers generally give very little thought to the magnitude of the tobacco business, and it is only by actual figures that they can be made to comprehend its importance. Even then the average mind is bewildered at the figures. P. Lorillard & Co., manufacturers of the celebrated Climax, Red Tin Tag Plug Tobacco, and the largest manufacturers of tobacco in the world, produce about one-sixth of all the tobacco consumed in this country, although there are 773 other manufactories in the United States. The total consumption in this country, according to actual statistics for 1883, was 139,783,782 pounds of which P. Lorillard & Co. furnished 24,747,289 pounds as follows:

	Pounds.
Plug Tobacco	19,028,456
Fine Cut	2,239,444
Smoking	2,375,994
Snuff	1,103,395

This is equivalent to about 83,000 pounds per day for every working day in the year. The tax paid to the Government on this product by the above firm the last year was $1,581,999 65, or $8,606 for each working day of the year. Astonishing as these figures appear, the firm is annually increasing its product, the increase for 1883 over that of 1882 being 5,341,000 pounds.

Who will claim in the face of these figures that tobacco has not become a necessity instead of being a luxury, as it has been so long regarded?—Grocer and Country Merchant.

THE NORTH AMERICAN REVIEW.—This magazine for February under the title of "How Shall the President be Elected" contains five articles on the subject, written by Senator Dawes of Massachusetts, Senator Vance of North Carolina, F. A. P. Barnard President of Columbia College, Roger A. Prior of New York, and William Purcell, a well known journalist. As the present method of election is generally regarded with disfavor and some better plan is ardently wished for by everybody, it is interesting to read these gentlemen's opinion. A review of "Holmes' Life of Emerson" by the historian, George Bancroft, is also one of the leading articles. "Shall Clergymen be Politicians" is treated by Dr. H. J. Van Dyke, Jr., and Rev. Henry Ward Beecher and like every subject that Mr. Beecher touches, no matter how common place, or whether you agree with him or not, he adds some new light, or turns up something old in a new and attractive way that always makes everything he writes interesting.—"New Departure in Education" by Prof. G. Stanley Hall, "The Certainty of Endless Punishment" by Rev. Dr. W. G. T. Shedd, "Theories regarding the Sun's Corona" by Prof. C. A. Young are also among the other able and instructive articles.

AN EXTRAORDINARY OFFER.

To All Wanting Employment.

We want live, energetic and capable agents in every county in the United States and Canada, to sell a patent article of great merit, on its merits. An article having a large sale, paying over 100 per cent. profit, having no competition, and on which the agent is protected in the exclusive sale by a deed given for each and every county he may secure from us. With all these advantages to our agents, and the fact that it is an article that can be sold to every house-owner, it might not be necessary to make an "extraordinary offer" to secure good agents at once, but we have concluded to show, not only our confidence in the merits of our invention, but in its salability by any agent that will handle with energy. Our agents now at work are making from $150 to $600 a month clear, and this fact makes it safe for us to make our offer to all who are out of employment. Any agent that will give our business a thirty days trial and fail to clear at least $100 in this time, above all expenses can return all goods unsold to us and we will refund the money paid for them. Any agent or general agent who would like ten or more counties and work them through sub-agents for ninety days, and fail to clear at least $750 above all expenses, can return all unsold and get their money back. No other employer of agents ever dared to make such great offers, nor would we if we did not know that we have agents now making more than double the amount we guaranteed, and but two sales a day would give a profit of over $125 a month, and that one of our agents took eighteen orders in one day.—our large descriptive circulars explain our offer fully, and these we wish to send every-one out of employment who will send us three one cent stamps for postage. Send at once and secure the agency in time for the boom, and go to work on the terms named in our extraordinary offer. We would like to have the address of all the agents, sewing machine solicitors and carpenters in the country, and ask any reader of this paper who reads this offer, to send us at once the name and address of all such they know.—Address at once, or you will lose the best chance ever offered to those out of employment to make money.

SPRING WITHOUT BLOSSOMS.

Late in Life to Look for Joy—Yet Never too Late to Mend.

Readers of Hawthorne's House of Seven Gables' will recall the pathos with which poor Clifford Pyncheon, who had been unjustly imprisoned since his early manhood, said after his release: 'My life is gone, and where is my happiness? Oh! give me my happiness.' But that could be done only in part, as gleams of warm sunshine occasionally fall across the gloom of a New England autumn day.

In a letter to Messrs. Hiscox & Co., Mr. L. H. Titus, of Pennington, N. J., says: 'I have suffered untold misery from childhood from chronic disease of the bowels and diarrhœa, accompanied by great pain. I sought relief at the hands of physicians of every school and used every patent and domestic remedy under the sun. I have at last found in PARKER'S TONIC a complete specific, preventive and cure. As your invaluable medicine, which did for me what nothing else could do, is entitled to the credit of my getting back my happy days, I cheerfully and gratefully acknowledge the fact.'

Mr. E. S. Wells, who needs no introduction to the people of Jersey City, adds: 'The testimonial of Mr. Titus is genuine and voluntary; only he does not adequately portray the suffering he has endured for many years. He is my brother-in-law and I know the case well. He is now perfectly free from his old troubles, and enjoys health and life, ascribing it all to PARKER'S TONIC.

Unequalled as an invigorant; stimulates all the organs; cures ailments of the liver, kidneys, and all diseases of the blood.

SCIENTIFIC MISCELLANY.

A permanent school of forestry will probably be established in connection with the University at Edinburgh.

Wet winters in Germany have been found to result disastrously to insects, each season of flood greatly lessening the "bug crop" of the following summer.

To recent progress in sanitary science Sir Joseph Fayrer, formerly surgeon-general of the army in India, attributes the fact that England's deathrate has decreased during the present century from forty in the thousand to twenty in the thousand.

An English chemist has confirmed by analyses the opinion that the lack of malleability in heated iron—or "red-shortness," as it is called—is due to the presence of oxygen. A red-short specimen contained 1,384 per cent. of oxygen, while samples free from the defect had only 0.750 per cent. or less.

A mountain explorer just returned from Asia states that during a four months' residence at a height of more than 15,000 feet above the sea his pulse, normally only sixty-three beats per minute, seldom fell below one hundred beats per minute, and his respirations were often twice as numerous as at ordinary levels.

After many observations at sea-level and at 15,000 feet above, Prof. S. P. Langley concludes that the mean absorption of light and heat by the atmosphere is at least double the usual estimate of twenty per cent. He believes, also, that dust particles play a more important part in this absorption than is generally supposed.

A new building material—a mixture of cork, silica and lime—is coming into extensive use in Germany. It has the advantage of keeping out heat and cold and is also claimed to be an excellent preventive of damp and a deadener of sound. It is substantial, light and durable, and seems to be especially adapted for ceilings and wall linings.

The Royal Geographical Society, of London, has published a list of 120 stations occupied by Europeans in Central Africa in 1884, with their latitude and longitude. Of these, sixty-one are situated between the equator and the Zambezi, east of the twenty-fifth degree of east longitude; and fifty-nine are west of that meridian, between the equator and Kuimen or Cunene.

The flexibility of itacolamite—a remarkable sandstone existing in Georgia and North and South Carolina—seems to be surpassed by that of a magnesian limestone found at the entrance of the Tyne, in England. This limestone is reported to be so flexible that thin layers three feet or more in length may be bent into a circle while damp, retaining that form on being allowed to dry.

From experimental measurements of the temperature of the body during acts of motion the following conclusions have been reached by a French observer: That the lowest temperature in man, following a period of rest, is 98 4 degrees; that the temperature rises under the influence of an ascending effort to 100. 6 degrees, and under the influence of a descending effort to 100. 3 degrees; that it increases after any exertion, but more after an ascending than after a descending one; and that the chemical actions of the organism are augmented after every movement.

A variety of articles made from so-called phosphoric glass, which is composed simply of phosphate of lime, have been exhibited to the French Academy of Sciences by Mons. Sidot. Unlike ordinary kinds, this glass resists the action of fluoric acid, and it will probably be useful to chemists and others on that account. A novel use of it in connection with cremation is supported by Mons. Henry de Parveille, who proposes that the phosphate of lime remaining as the ashes of each burned body be converted into phosphoric glass, and then molded into a vase, medallion, or statuette of the person from whom it has been derived.

The remarkable river Reka rises in Austrian province of Carniola, and disappears in the Karst caves. There are reasons for believing that it flows a long distance underground, emerging twenty miles away as the Timavo, a streams which mysteriously pours out of a hillside. Members of the Austro-German Alpine Club have lately attempted an exploration of the subterranean course of the Reka, and have succeeded in following it about one furlong, passing six waterfalls and reaching a seventh which proved to be impassable without special apparatus.—One of the caverns encountered is reported to be capacious enough to contain St. Peter's Cathedral of Rome.

A very general but erroneous belief is that the breathing of pure oxygen would rapidly destroy animal life by quickening the combustion in the body as the same gas hastens the burning of the fuel of an ordinary fire. A German physiologist has just shown by exact experiment on men and dogs that the inhalation of pure oxygen produces no effects—at least upon pulse, respiration and body temperature—which distinguish its action from that of pure atmospheric air; and that its use in cases of poisoning with chloroform, alcohol, sulphuretted hydrogen or carbonic oxide offers no advantage over that of pure air. The same experimenter has determined that diluted ozone does not possess the narcotic influence usually ascribed to it, and that concentrated ozone causes an injurious irritation of the mucous membrane when breathing.

THERE never has been offered the people of Cambria county a medicine so deserving of praise and patronage as McDonald's celebrated Worm Powders. They combine the three most desirable points in any remedy viz: Smallness of dose, easiness to take and effectiveness. They are positively the greatest worm destroyer of the age. Many children suffer continually and finally die, their parents never dreaming that their stomachs are infested and eaten through with worms. Twenty-five cents invested in a box of McDonald's celebrated Worm Powders would have saved the little sufferer's life and given back its rosy cheeks and blooming health. Any case of failure to cause expulsion where worms exist, the money promptly refunded. Sold by E. James, Ebensburg.

THE WEEKLY POST

Under a Democratic National Administration.

The Will of the People Vindicated and the Great Wrong Righted.

THE PITTSBURG WEEKLY POST

congratulates its Democratic readers on the dawn of a new year, under conditions that have not existed for a quarter of a century—

"Ring out the old, ring in the new,
Ring out the false, ring in the true."

Cleveland and Hendricks have been elected. After the fourth of March there will be a Democratic administration at Washington, with great possibilities for the progress, prosperity and advancement of the country.

As THE POST has labored unceasingly for twenty-five years for these glorious results, so it will extend to the new administration a hearty greeting and a cordial support in the re-establishment of principles and policies vital to the public welfare, by reforming abuses, righting wrongs and asserting the supremacy of the Democratic faith. We are on the threshold of important events and great changes. To a Democrat who aided in Cleveland's election, the future is full of interest and hope.

THE WEEKLY POST will aim to keep fully abreast of the times in everything relating to the incoming administration. Its policy at home and abroad will be intelligently discussed, generously supported or candidly and kindly criticised. No year in the history of this journal promises to be so replete with matters of interest to Democrats as the one which we are about to enter. The meeting of Congress, the declaration of the Presidential vote, the inauguration, the new Cabinet, the changes in the public service, the opening up of the books, all are of great concern. THE WEEKLY POST will furnish the earliest intelligence, with judicious comment from the old Democratic standpoint. Success will not hamper it any more than a quarter of a century of defeat impaired its energies.

The session of the Legislature, with a Reform Governor opposed by a Republican majority, promises to be fruitful of important issues and exciting incident. The coming session of Congress will be even more interesting in its broader field.

In all its varied departments, THE WEEKLY POST will aim at excellence and reliability. Its literary, miscellaneous, news and local departments will be maintained in their utmost efficiency, while its market reports will be prepared with greater care and precision than ever before and made absolutely reliable.

Now the time for Democrats everywhere to take hold, cement and strengthen the party and its chosen representatives, by extending the circulation of Democratic papers. We are no longer on the defensive—we are done with apologizing—the party to-day stands for a majority of the American people, and in a few weeks it will be called on to administer the general Government. Truth is mighty and has prevailed.

An Old Soldier's
EXPERIENCE.

"Calvert, Texas,
May 3, 1882.

"I wish to express my appreciation of the valuable qualities of

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

as a cough remedy.

"While with Churchill's army, just before the battle of Vicksburg, I contracted a severe cold, which terminated in a dangerous cough. I found no relief till on our march we came to a country store, where, on asking for some remedy, I was urged to try AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL.

"I did so, and was rapidly cured. Since then I have kept the PECTORAL constantly by me, for family use, and I have found it to be an invaluable remedy for throat and lung diseases. J. W. WHITLEY."

Thousands of testimonials certify to the prompt cure of all bronchial and lung affections, by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. Being very palatable, the youngest children take it readily.

LIVE STOCK NOTES.

Keep accounts.

Look out for fires.

Manure may be carried out.

Keep work horses well shod.

Ashes are a good thing on icy walks.

Brood cows should be kept rather fat.

Filthy stables cannot tend to good butter.

In planning for the future consult the past.

Don't feed hens all corn if you want them to lay.

How to color butter with carrots: feed them liberally.

Stable floors should be arranged to save all the liquids.

Young stock should be kept in a growing condition all winter.

Keep the horses well shod in icy weather with sharp, but not long calks.

An animal is wintered at a loss that only "holds its own" from fall to spring.

Sheep will live on hay and corn fodder, they will thrive on the same with an added mixture of a quart of corn and oats per day.

Always avoid abrupt changes in feeding. One advantage of good ensilage is that it helps to avoid sudden changes from pasture to dry feed.

Turn the young cattle and 'underlings' out of the stalls to drink before the old ones. It is cruelty to let them take their chances all winter long at the water-trough.

If you are not saving the liquid excretions of the cattle, to throw upon the compost heap (which of course is under shelter,) you are losing money. This is one of the most valuable parts of the compost.

It is an erroneous idea that pigs love filth; give them clean, warm quarters. It take a good deal of cornmeal to counterbalance the effect of frosty air coming through numerous crevices in the hog pen. Warmth is essential to fattening.

An Indiana farmer says that he cured heaves in horses by withholding hay from them and substituting green food in its place. He also gives a ball as large as a walnut, composed of equal parts of balsam fir and balsam of copaiba.

We do not believe in blanketing horses in the stable. It is advisable to throw on blankets when the team comes in warm after a drive, but only for an hour or two. Have the stables warm enough to keep the horses warm without blankets; they will stand the cold better when out of doors.

WE have seen farmers throw a fork of splendid hay into each fence corner, and more on top of the manure pile, only to be half trampled under foot. The same men wonder why their hay does'nt "go farther." The farm-yard without a good feeding rack, or racks, lacks an important convenience. Remember, we can make hay in winter as well as in summer.

Something for all the Preachers.

Rev. H. H. Fairall, D. D., editor of the Iowa Methodist, says editorially in the November (1883) issue of his paper: "We have tested the merits of Ely's Cream Balm, and believe that by a thorough course of treatment, it will cure almost every case of catarrh. Ministers, as a class, are afflicted with head and throat troubles, and catarrh seems more prevalent than ever. We cannot recommend Ely's Cream Balm too highly." Not a liquid nor a snuff. CASTING BIG GUNS.

The method of casting heavy ordnance as practiced at South Boston is very simple. The ordnance room contains three furnaces arranged in triangular shape. From each of these furnaces an iron trough is run, all of which converge at a common centre and empty into a large tank. From this tank runs another trough, emptying into the mold where the gun is cast. The philosophy of this scheme is to preserve a fluid homogeneity, and consequently a uniform density of the metal when cooled. By running the troughs directly from each to the mold this result could not be obtained. The mold an immense iron concern, is placed in the ground and reaches a depth of forty-five feet. Through the centre of the mold, running the entire length, is an iron arbor, around which is wound a coil of rope, and outside the rope is placed a layer of clay. Through the centre of the arbor run two pipes, through which a continuous stream of water is run while the casting is in progress, the object of which is to keep the temperature of the bore lower than the other parts of the gun. This makes the bore the strongest part of the piece, and enables it to bear the greatest pressure.

When the order was given by the foreman, the aperatures in the furnace were opened, and the golden colored metal began to run. Millions of sparks, all taking the form of a little star, and rivalling in brilliancy and grandeur the colors of the most golden sunset, leaped and frolicked about the troughs. It was a beautiful sight, not easily forgotten, and murmurs of admiration were heard on every side among the crowd. The metal flowed on for thirty minutes, but was exhausted before the mold was full. The mold was filled, however, above the mark where the gun is cut off, and the casting was considered very successful. It was necessary to melt three additional tons of iron to fill up the mold.

The dimensions of the gun are: Rough cast, 120 tons; when finished, 55 tons; length 40 feet; bore, 12 inches.—Boston Herald.

A WONDERFUL GUN.—A Philadelphia inventor, Hiram S. Maxim, the inventor of the system of electric lighting that bears his name, has invented a machine gun that fires six hundred shots a minute from a single barrel. The gun with its tripod only weighs 126 pounds, and it is arranged in such a way that the force of the recoil from one round at the moment of firing is utilized and forms the motive power for loading and firing the next round. The cartridges are kept in a canvas belt seven yards long, in a box under the gun; you insert one end of the belt in the gun, start the firing and then you can train the gun as you choose, while the discharge proceeds mechanically.

A new belt can be attached as the old one is emptied. The barrel is surrounded by a water jacket to prevent it from becoming heated. If the man working the gun should be killed, the gun would go on firing mechanically till the cartridges were exhausted, unless some faulty cartridge interfered. Certainly a machine gun which one man can work, and which fires ten shots a second, is something important in murderous discovery.—London Times.

"Like Hot Cakes."

The above is an old-time expression and nearly as "old as the hills," but yet it is occasionally brought into good use, and placed in a position where it counts and adds great weight to the words accompanying it. This is true in the following testimonial sent to Dr. S. B. Hartman & Co., by Messrs. Parrett & Son, druggists, of Greenfield, Ohio, who say:

"Send us some more advertising matter. Your medicine is selling like hot cakes.—Send us a good supply, for we need it badly."

Those men know when they handle a good thing. Judging from the above, Peruna and Manalin must be in good demand to that country. Being composed purely of vegetable ingredients druggists feel safe in recommending them to their friends.—Send for the pamphlet on the "Ills of Life."

Must Go.

The horrible nauseous worm-seed compounds called vermifuges and worm syrups, many of them as worthless as they are obnoxious, have had their day. It is a downright cruelty to compel a child to take them, when McDonald's Celebrated Worm Powders, so easy and pleasant to take that children will take them and never know a medicine is being administered, can be procured for the small sum of twenty five cents.—Any case of failure to cause expulsion where worms exist, the money promptly refunded.

Value of Corn as Food for Live Stock.

Corn is so rich in oil that we may say corn bread is ready buttered; it is, however, very digestible, and in cold weather this oiliness is a most valuable factor, as it serves to keep up the heat of the body more directly than starch and similar substances. With oats and barley it may form one third of the grain ration of hard worked draft horses, and will keep their coats glossy, and be in every way a benefit, certainly worth more than its weight in oats. Fed by itself, or in larger quantities it has a tendency to make horses sweat easily, and, it is said, to become quickly exhausted. It is not safe to feed it as freely as oats or barley, as there is danger of impaction, just as there would be if wheat were so fed. No doubt it is best fed ground with oats, and the proportions already indicated are probably the most satisfactory, the meal being fed upon cut hay.

For cows in milk, cornmeal may form with bran the exclusive grain rations, and may be fed at the rate of one pint of cornmeal to each hundred pounds of the cow's live weight. No doubt it will be found just as good in Great Britain as here. It gives quality and richness to the milk, color to the butter and abundance to the flow if the cow is a good one; but if she is inclined to lay on fat such feeding will cause her to fatten, even though in full milk, and if she gets too fat she will go dry.

For sheep, corn is excellent, but it should be fed whole and a little at a time. For swine, the universal experience from Maine to Oregon, and from Canada to Mexico, is that it will make more and better pork than any other food. For poultry, it is in this country universal grain, but it is not always the best. It is admirable for its fattening properties, but for laying hens and growing fowls, it is not well to use too much. "Corn fed" fowls, ducks and geese are exceedingly firm-fleshed and yet tender. They bear transportation alive with little shrinkage. True, corn makes yellow butter and yellow fat in fowls. English and French tastes demand white fleshed poultry, with pale, lardy fat, and so they fatten poultry on rice, and their fancy market fowls have about as much flavor as boiled rice.—The American market demands yellow fleshed fowls, with fat as yellow as June butter, and corn is the food to produce this in all poultry.—Lancaster Farmer.

PROVERBS ABOUT LIFE.—The comparison of human life to a flood has ever been a favorite figure in every literature, and the proverbs which deal with life and expound its problems under this figure are past numbering. In Japan, the significance of man is forcibly put in the proverb, "As the stars, so man is little in the distance," while the Persian says: "The world is like an old building on the banks of a stream—is carried away piece by piece; in vain you attempt to stop it with a handful of earth." The passage of life is like the growth and decay of a flower, and this fact forms the burden of many proverbs. The Turk asks, "Have you ever seen a day which ends not in evening?" and the Arab answers, "Every day in thy life is a leaf in thy history." The Afghan philosophically remarks, "Life is not such a mouthful that man should gulp it down whole." The changing state of man is beautifully set forth in the Syrian proverb, "Happiness of life is lik crystal—when it shines most it soon cracks," and a Japanese proverb pronounces life, "Like a moth falling on a lighted candle," an image to be compared only with that of Job, who pronounces life "A light before the wind."

The friendships of life are a fertile source of proverbs. The Urdu says, "The friendship of the base is a wall of sand," and the Arab relieves his mind in the same direction by observing, "A bad friend is like a smith, who if he does not burn you with fire, will injure you with smoke." The origin of "Two souls with but a single thought," is doubtless the Turkish proverb, "Friends are one soul in two bodies," and the Talmud declares, "A man without a friend is a left hand without a right." The folly of forming friendships with some people is illustrated by the Afghan proverb, "The ass, friendship is kicking," while the Chinese affirm, "Without a mirror a woman cannot see her face; without a friend a man cannot see his actions," but the Japanese correctly appreciate the situation when they say, "A friend at hand it better than all your relatives at a distance."—St. Louis Globe Democrat.

WOMEN'S NAMES.—Annabella is not Anna-bella or fair Anna, but is the feminine of Hannibal, meaning gift (or grace) of Bel. Arabella is not Arabella, or beautiful altar, but Orabilia, a praying woman. In its Anglicized form of Orabel it was much more common than at present. Maurice has nothing to do with Mauritius, or a Moor, but comes from Almaric—himmelreich—the kingdom of heaven.

Ellen is the feminine of of Alain, Allan or Alan, and has no possible connection with Helen, which comes from a different language and is older by at least 1,000 years. Amy is not from amee, but from amie. Avice, or Avis, does not exactly mean advice, as some seem to think. It comes from Ædwis, and means happy wisdom. Eliza has no connection with Elizabeth. It is the sister of Louisa, and both are the daughters of Heloise, which is Heliwis, hidden wisdom. There is, indeed, another form of Louisa, or rather Louise, which is the feminine of Louis, but it was scarcely heard before the sixteenth century.

The older Heloise form of the name, Aloisa, Aloisia or Aloysia, was adopted into mediæval English as Alesia—which our old genealogists always confused with Alice. Emily and Amelia are not different forms of one name. Emily is from Æmylia, the name of an Etruscan gens. Amelia comes from the Gothic amalia, heavenly. Reginald is not derived from Regina, and has nothing to do with a queen. It is Rein-alt, exalted purity. Alice, Adelais, Adelaide, Aliza, Alix and Adeline are all forms of one name, the root of which is adel, noble. But Anne was never used as identical with Annis or Agnes (of which last the old Scottish is a variety; nor as I sturdily maintained, was Elizabeth ever synonymous with Isabel.—Notes and Queries.
